I am a self-taught artist devoted to continuous experimentation, learning, and self-discovery. My focus is on minimalism, with emphasis on light, color, new materials and texture. I often begin with an idea in mind, but experimentation, accidents, and serendipity take me in new directions that I rarely anticipated. I learned that my mistakes can be the best assembly of new tools that I now embrace and incorporate into my continuously evolving work. The end result is often one that I could not have conceived, and I let my creation define where to go and when to stop.
