Ansel Adams and Edward Weston are inspiration for me.... While traveling extensively, I have documented my worldwide travels. When people ask the kind of photography I specialize in, I tell them I photograph what interests me. With this interest comes plenty of serendipity: while taking pictures (surreptitiously I thought) of a proposal-in-progress at the Venice Beach pier several years ago, the young man walked toward me. Thinking I was about to be reprimanded, I was happily surprised when he asked if I would mind staying around for ten minutes more to take more pictures as a plane was to fly by with his proposal in Portuguese on a banner. This led to a new friendship and the honor of attending the wedding of our new Polish doctor friend (by way of Australia) and his bride (a lawyer) in Olinda, Brazil. I was also able to photograph the Women's World Cup finals in Lyon, France while traveling with my wife, daughter and her two girls.
