"Beauty is the splendor of truth"
Plato

"Beauty is the anticipation of pleasure"
Nehamas

"Beauty is nothing but the beginning of terror which we are barely able to endure"
Rilke

Drawing and painting are arenas in which to explore the interweaving of the mundane and the resonant, the physical and the spiritual, the structural and the gestural. My work takes off from everyday material--gestures, expressions, and moments from street scenes, family, newspapers, and films—to elicit the liveliness of movement or rest, the relations between us and the marks we make and see.
